

Complimentary Baked Goods

DEAR TIM

admirable is not the word that comes to mind. What I assume you're excited about is the full line of Orlando brand bakery products in aisle 3. From fresh French rolls to dinner rolls and breads, there's definitely lots to like about Orlando's buns. And I'm secure enough in my masculinity to say so.

Dear Tim:

Nice buns.

Dear Baked:

While I appreciate the compliment, I'm not foolish enough to believe you're honestly admiring my backside. I've seen my backside, and the pumpkin farm this year, but I still want to decorate for Halloween. Can you hook me up?

-Rained Out on Randmore

Dear Rained Out:

You bet. We went to the farm for you, and we've got plenty of pumpkins, gourds, straw bundles and corn stalks to show for it. Stop by with the trunk open and we'll load you up. And if you've got a minute, step inside and grab some apple cider, too. A few sips will make the season complete.

Tim's Tidbits:

The winners of this year's Huffman's Market Chili Cookoff are John Novak (traditional) and Jena Skowronski (non-traditional). They bested a strong field of competitors at the UA Fall Festival to take the crown. Stop by the deli to get their recipes, and pick up some meat for your own while you're here.

Dear Tim:

With all the rain, we didn't make it out to
