

From Low To High

Dear Tim:

My mom's been feeling low lately. She's retired, so the financial crisis has been hard on her. She's also had some health problems lately. She's been keeping a stiff upper lip, but I know she could use a pick-me-up. Any ideas?

-Son on Souder

Dear Son:

Your mom (and all moms for that matter) deserves to feel the opposite of low, and we've got just the thing. It's our annual Huffman's Market High Tea. It's this Saturday from noon to 3:00 PM at the store. There'll be tea, snacks and smiles for hours, and you don't even need to RSVP. Just bring yourself and your mom for a little Mother's Day preview and, for your mom, a much-needed pick-me-up.

Dear Tim:

With the Cleveland Cavaliers

DEAR
TIM

on what looks like a march through the NBA playoffs, it's getting harder to be a Boston Celtics fan in central Ohio. Any advice?

-Green on Grenoble

Dear Green:

Yes. Consider changing your allegiance. Based on what I'm seeing, I think LeBron

James is here to stay, which may make Celtics championship bashes like last year's fewer and farther between. You might also consider consoling yourself with something from Boston that may have a better chance of being alive after round three of the playoffs – one of our beautiful Boston Ferns. Much like LeBron, they're terribly popular and filling up baskets in bunches out front.

Dear Tim:

Congratulations on winning the Ohio Grocers Association Pinnacle Award. Whose backside do you have to smooch to win a big honor like that?

-Customer on Colchester

Dear Customer:

Yours.
