

Peeved About Pryor

DEAR TIM

Dear Tim:

I've seen some good acting in my day, but that Terrelle Pryor press conference last week was the best I've seen in a while. The way he tried to look all sincere and contrite about torpedoing the Ohio State football program was Oscar-worthy. Can you believe this guy?

-Gagging on Gavin

Dear Gagging:

I don't know if Mr. Pryor deserves an Oscar any more than the other compromised characters in this fiasco, but I'd be willing to nominate all of them for Razzies because they've all performed badly. Speaking of raspberries, we've got plenty of hand-picked Driscoll's berries in the fresh fruit section at the front of the store this summer.

And unlike this seemingly endless scandal, I guarantee they won't make you gag.

Dear Tim:

I'm having a hard time finding a doctor who's not only a good fit for my medical needs but also a fit for my personality. I'm not asking for a lot. Just someone who takes the time to get to know me, gives me good advice and guidance, and can be good natured about my fear of strange machines and needles. Any suggestions?

-Doctorless on Dorset

Dear Doctorless:

I know what you mean about machines and needles. It's why I never got Glenda's name tattooed on my chest like she asked. Anyway, from my experience, there are lots of great doctors out there – especially here in UA. They just have lots of patients already. You're better off asking your friends who they see than combing the phone book (do they still make phone books?) and hoping to hit the sawbones jackpot. And if that fails, I know one doctor who's always been big on personality. Dr. Pepper. He comes in regular and Diet. Aisle 1.
