

Confounded By Construction

DEAR TIM

Dear Tim:

When did Upper Arlington turn into a continuous construction zone? I came back to visit my family for the Fourth and it didn't matter which way I turned, I couldn't get where I needed to go. Lane Avenue was a disaster and Fishinger was essentially closed. What's going on?

-Visitor from Vermont

Dear Visitor:

If you think it was bad for you as a visitor, imagine what it's like for the folks who live here. It's been like this every day for months. The Lane project seems to be helping the power company at the expense of the residents and businesses – the same power company that can't seem to keep the lights on around here any time it rains. It's about as frustrating as waiting in a 20-minute check-out line at Giant Eagle.

Dear Tim:

Was that you and your crew giving away free hot dogs at Northwest and Northam before the parade?

-Dogman on Dodridge

Dear Dogman:

Indeed it was. It's become one of our little Huffman's holiday traditions. And unlike a certain congressman, our wieners and buns are as wholesome as they come.
