

Beating The Heat

DEAR TIM

Dear Tim:

I'm having a hard time beating the heat this summer. I bet we've been over 90 more times than Princess Katherine's scale. Any suggestions?

-Hot on Hoxton

Dear Hot:

Big bags of ice. Right by the front entrance. Drop a few cubes in your drink, under your hat and down your back.

Dear Tim:

Was that you I saw cruising around town in a shiny red golf cart? Looked like fun, but as much as it would seem to make sense from an economical and environmental standpoint, I thought the city put the brakes on licensing carts for city streets. Are you some kind of outlaw now?

-Cartman on Cardigan

Dear Cartman:

I don't know if I'm an outlaw, but I'm definitely an in-law. As for the golf cart, that was definitely me. I find it to be a smart, safe, fuel-free way to go the seven blocks from home to the market each day. And since the speed limit is as fast as the cart can go, I never have to worry about breaking the law. Unless Council decides what I do is bad for the city. What do you think?
