

Fair Game

Dear Tim:

My brother and I were having a friendly go at each other about our favorite teams and their likelihood of winning the championship this year when he brought up some off-the-field issues my favorite player has been having. Is that fair game in a sports debate?

Dear Miffed:

It seems like everything's fair game these days. Especially when it comes to sports. These guys pursue the spotlight and make insane amounts of money. Their behavior gets lots of attention – good and bad. So don't be surprised (or hurt) when it comes up. Speaking of fair game, the Ohio State Fair is here. That means we'll have some Fair game of our own pretty soon. Like Ohio-bred, born and raised State Fair beef and pork. You'll find both in our meat department after their time in the spotlight. Then they'll take one for the team.
