

Do This For Dads

Dear Tim:

It seems like the only things anyone's suggesting for Father's Day gifts this year are electronics. My dad's pretty tech savvy and has pretty much everything he wants. So what should I give him?

-Stumped on StinsonDear Stumped:

One of my favorite comedians once suggested that the only thing dads were guaranteed for all their hard work and commitment to their families was the big piece of chicken come dinnertime. And while that may be a funny oversimplification, it does seem that way to dads sometimes.

So if you want to give your dad something he really wants this Father's Day, don't make it a new phone or a tie. Give him a heartfelt hug and a sincere "thank you." And if you want to give him the big piece of chicken, too, great. See James back at the meat counter. He's setting the biggest pieces aside just for this weekend.
