

Edible Clothes Pins

Dear Tim:

My wife went to your store for clothes pins and came back with dessert. What kind of place are you running over there?

—Confounded on Canterbury

Dear Confounded:

I understand you didn't get what you expected, but did you really give your wife a hard time for bringing home dessert? Do you realize the precedent you're setting here? There are just some things you never say 'no' to. And there's a chance she got exactly what she came for anyway. Clothes Pins are a little confection we feature. They're like cream horns, only smaller. Pretty tasty, too. If you're still short of traditional clothes pins, we've still got those in aisle 5. But I'd take the dessert if I were you.

Dear Tim:

What's the big wing ding you're having at Tremont Center on Saturday?

—Curious on Camden

DEAR TIM

Dear Curious:

Glad you asked. We're capping off our observance of Ohio Parents Week with the Tremont Center Celebration. From noon to 3:00 p.m. on Saturday, all the merchants here at Tremont Center will be having a special sidewalk sale. There will be free hot dogs, chips and beverages, plus an inflatable bouncer and train rides. It's all part of a national effort to encourage families to eat together, play together and stay together. And after you're done having fun, you'll still have time to get home and watch the Buckeyes beat Iowa together, too.

Dear Tim:

Is there anything sweeter than a grandchild?

—Gramma on Grace

Dear Gramma:

I used to think there was nothing sweeter than Graeter's Buckeye Blitz ice cream (available by the pint in the freezer case by the registers). Of course, that was before Glenda and I became grandparents for the first time last month. After that experience, I'd have to agree with you. There is nothing sweeter than a grandchild. Especially mine. Hi Amelia!
